NLP Practitioner Training and Life Coaching Certification

OVERVIEW

NLP (Neuro-Linguistic Programming) is a modeling technology that enables you to achieve your full potential in your and others' personal and professional life.

As the NLP framework suggests, "Everything possible in my models (people I want to emulate) is possible for me to realize; when I understand what they do and HOW they do it (modeling)." NLP is "the technology of human excellence."

NLP is also about studying how people organize their thinking, feeling, language and behavior. This study leads to a powerful change in technology in helping people have new life experiences by changing their mental maps and developing new and more effective behaviors.

NLP began as a modeling technology when John Grinder and Richard Bandler embarked on their work in capturing the patterns of genius in change workers Fritz Perls, Virginia Satir, and Milton Erickson. The result of modeling these geniuses are the excellent models and patterns which have spread globally from the therapy room to the family room and the boardroom.

NEURO: Everyone has established their own unique mental filtering system for processing the millions of bits of data being absorbed through the senses.

LINGUISTIC: We then assign personal meaning to the information being received from the world outside.

PROGRAMMING: The behavioral response that occurs because of neurological filtering processes and the subsequent linguistic map.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

This NLP Practitioner Training and Life Coaching Certification Course aim to empower participants with specific tools and techniques to model excellence. We will focus on the differences between the performance of geniuses and average performers. The core activity of NLP is mapping tacit knowledge onto an explicit model and applications.
